SOME UNUSUAL FOOD PLANTS.

Delicacies to Arouse the Envy of Lotus Eaters.

I begin my list of the more novel food plants which flowers. Nasturtiums or Indian cress, which grow for their beauty, are used by many in salads, both flowers and leaves, and the seeds are picked as mock capers. Acacia and apple blossoms were used for fritters abroad, also comfrey and the cowslip or clary for fritters and for wine. The flowers of the English cowslip or clary were also crushed and used in a sponge-cake pudding a century ago. When chrysanthemums were very costly, a young California Lucullus had a salad made of them. They may also be served hot in white sauce. The chef of an American of wealth arranged violets on a lettuce salad dressed with old Burgundy, and pronounced it vramment lyrique. Candied violets ornament all fine boxes of confectionery nowadays, and a syrup of them is made in parts of the south, also violet soda, violet jelly, violet fritters, etc. Where flowers are used in fritters they are first steeped in brandy. In Italy, near Naples, squash blossoms are dipped in batter and fried. In Germany, elderflowers are used the same way, and to flavor wine and vinegar. The use of the elderberries for wine and pies and preserves, mixed with apples, green grapes, etc., is much more common here. Cloves and cassia buds are the flowers of tropical trees, and, sugar coated, were a favorite candy in old times. Jasmine is one of the many flowers from which to make a flavoring, mentioned by Jules Gouffe, chef of the Paris Jockey club, the author of "Livres de Cuisine." He, alas, does not say which jasmine, and some are poisonous. Presumably, in France, where they are cultivated for perfume, the information on this point is more general. In fact, noted French cooks use a few drops of finest strong cognac, which contains jasmine and other flowers, on a lump of sugar dissolved in the wine with which they dress mixed fruits. In an old French book many flowers are mentioned from which to make flavoring extracts or sirups, as poppy, jonquil, and the lime or linden. Old English books give receipts for clover-gilly flowers and peach-blossom sirups.

The stalks of angelica arkangelica are candied, and are of a beautiful green color. We are familiar with it in fine cakes often contrasted with red candied cherries. I presume some have thought it very green citron. The barberries along our New England coast make a brilliant scarlet and not unpleasantly acid jelly and a decorative scarlet pickle as well, left whole in bunches to surround green gherkins. I have heard of mountain rash berries being used for jelly. Of the many haws, one variety especially is used for jelly and sold in far southern markets. The carrageen, or Irish moss, makes a delicious, nourishing blanc mange, and a soothing beverage in illness. The Iceland moss, a lichen, not a seaweed, is used also for the sick. The dulse, a seaweed much esteemed in Ireland as food, can often be seen by the barrel in American cities. Basil, burnet, or pimpinell, and borage are little known, though I have found basil in Alabama markets and have raised borage. Borage has pretty blue flowers, and is used in salads and soups and in a few punches where some epicures of today substitute a slice of cucumber. Sirup of poppy flower I have spoken of, but not of the seeds, which are much used in Europe and wherever we have German bakers, as in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago, where we see the black "mohn" or poppy seed used more than the white on rolls and twists. Taraminds are beneficial as a drink or a whey in illness, and baked with shad in old Maryland for those not invalids. The flowers, leaves, and tender seeds of the ben are used in curries. This plant is grown in our southern states. The Negroes used to mix the not unpleasant oily seeds with cornmeal, and they are referred to in old southern receipts for soup. In India the blossoms of the ben and coconut are made into hors d'oeuvres with other plants.

FIVE OIL CARRIERS.

The Pacific Fleet Makes Headway in Fuel Reform.

San Francisco, May 2.—A fleet of five big oil carriers will soon be running between San Francisco and the Hawaiian Islands. The Union Oil Company of California is promoter of the project. Two vessels are building and negotiations are pending for the construction of three steamers.

At Hay & Wright's shipyard in Oakland a four-masted barkentine is building for the Union Oil Company. The vessel will be the largest wooden sailing vessel ever constructed on the Pacific Coast. An oil tank will occupy the larger part of her carrying space. She will be capable of transporting 17,500 barrels of oil. She will be launched the latter part of May.

The barkentine is the only sailing vessel to be constructed for the Union Oil Company. Four steamers will be built. The Union Iron Works has the contract for an oil-tank steamer with capacity for 10,000 barrels. She will burn oil as fuel. But the company intends to add to its fleet one of the largest tank steamers plying in the trade. Negotiations are pending for the construction of a steamer which will carry 41,000 barrels of oil. Two other steamers will also be secured by the company for the oil trade.

Scarcity of Platinum.

The history of platinum, which was discovered about the middle of the 18th century, differs from that of other rare metals in that the increased demand has not been met by repeated discoveries of new deposits. Hence the price of platinum has risen enormously. In 1822 platinum was worth $1,000 a pound, in 1870 $900, this slight decrease being due to the discovery of the Ural deposits in 1822. In 1895 the price per pound had risen to $2,700, and in December of last year to $4,800. Platinum was first found in South America and regarded as a variety of silver. Hence the name, from the Spanish plata, silver. It occurs as platinum dust in Colombia, Brazil, Hayti, and also in Borneo, but the Ural region is the chief source of supply. The annual output of the Ural mines is about 8,000 pounds, while the rest of the world furnishes only about 1,300 pounds. The mining of platinum has, therefore, been developed almost entirely in Russia, and a suspicion has arisen that the output is restricted purposely, in order to enhance the price; but this supposition seems to be without foundation. The Russian government, indeed, is said to be contemplating the recall of coins minted before 1850, which contain platinum, for the purpose of reclaiming the metal. Most of these coins, however, disappeared from circulation long ago, having been melted by chemists and technicians in search of platinum. If no new source is discovered, the scarcity of platinum will soon be felt seriously in many industries.

Congressmen Knock Sailors.

Washington, May 16.—The House had another lively day of debate today, Philippine atrocities and the Schley case coming in for considerable attention. The naval appropriation bill received little attention. Cannon of Illinois and Hepburn of Iowa brought on the discussion by criticising the extent to which naval officers secured comfortable berths ashore, whereupon Williams of Mississippi made a very sarcastic speech at the expense of Admiral Crowninshield, during which he read a poem describing the late head of the Bureau of Navigation as "the greatest tar that ever stayed ashore." Williams denied the assertion of Grow of Pennsylvania that Philippine war methods were similar to those of the Civil War. Cochran of Missouri re-enforced Williams in this contention, while Landis of Indiana discussed the resolutions adopted Union veterans of Indiana, comparing "the copperheads of the present day," who criticised the Army in the Philippines, with the copperheads of '61-'65.
